Dear Horace:-

Just a few lines to tell you that I have not forgotten the splendid work you were doing as a serious student of the accordion and I shall always hold in admiration the sincere collaboration between yourself and our mutual friend, Alf Carlson, as your capable teacher. Such partnership can spell nothing else but complete success in your musical endeavors. Alf has informed me of your fine work in the Army shows and also, to my regret, that you have been taken down with illness. I do hope that your convalescence will be brief and will urge you in the meantime to build and add to your knowledge of music in any opportune manner until such time when you can resume your technical exploitation again. Always remember that you have youth to your advantage and that is priceless at this time. You also have those near you who have your interest at heart, especially Alf, who will do all he can for you.

I trust that I may have occasion to see you in the not too distant future as well as all our mutual friends in your part of the country.

In the meantime please accept my best wishes again for a speedy recovery.

Very truly yours,
